DO RICHES BRING HAPPINESS?

Some Very Rich Men Say They Do Not.
But We Have Not Heard of One of Them Giving Up His Riches.
WEALTH IS VANITY.

Russell Sage: Riches, like everything else in life, are all vanity and vexation of spirit. Few people have any idea of the many inconveniences which wealth brings. Those who have will never ask such a foolish question as, "Does wealth bring happiness?"

First of all, there are the begging letter writers. Once let people think you are rich, and before a year has passed you will have received from people you never before heard of requests for loans, gifts and offices of profit sufficient to exhaust the combined patronage of all the lord chancellors Great Britain ever had and to break the Bank of England.

A rich man is compelled to be constantly in the public eye. Privacy is practically impossible for him. The public is curious to know more about him, telling how he opens his letters and puts on his shoes, and what he has for breakfast. An incognito is an impossibility for him. Everybody knows him and his entrance into a shop is often a signal for an addition of at least 25 per cent to the price of any article he may desire to purchase. These are a few of the many reasons why most rich men would probably give a negative answer to the question, "Does wealth bring happiness?"

HOW IT BRINGS HAPPINESS.

Andrew Carnegie: Wealth can only bring happiness in the sense that it brings us greater opportunities of making others happy. Great wealth is a sacred trust which the man who possesses it should hold and administer to the best possible advantage for the benefit of his fellow men. The truest happiness—indeed, the only happiness in this life worthy of the name—is to make others happy; or, at least, by improving their condition in some way to make them happier than they otherwise would be. When we have exhausted every other so called pleasure, that of bringing the look of joyful surprise to the eye and the words of grateful happiness to the lips of others remains perennial.

The many ways in which a rich man can produce gratifying results are self-evident. Wealth will enable its possessor to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, endow free institutions of learning, establish free libraries, found hospitals and do countless other good works. It will enable him to entertain his friends amid pleasurable surroundings and help them to the enjoyment of some happy hours.

In this way, and in this way only—in the power it confers of making others happy—can wealth, per se, bring happiness.

GENERAL SUMMING UP.

In connection with the words of living millionaires, let us hear the words of the late George Peabody, the great philanthropist. He once said to young people:

"Bear in mind that to be truly great, it is not necessary that you should gain in wealth and importance. Steadfast and straightout truth, fearless and undeviating integrity, and honor never sullied by unworthy word or action, make their possessor greater than worldly success or prosperity. These qualities constitute greatness."

As a fitting conclusion to this article, let us put the question to the wisest and one of the richest men that ever lived—King Solomon—and get his answer. He says: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold. Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."
